

Canadian Children's Literature 1977: A Bibliography

MARY RUBIO & JOHN SORFLEET

A bibliography can serve in many ways – as a research tool, as a checklist, and as a means to gain a quick overview of what is being published in a certain area in a given year. Recognizing the need for a concise bibliography of each year's output of Canadian books for children, CCL agreed to take over this responsibility from the Journal of Canadian Fiction, which had been including juvenile titles in its annual bibliography of Canadian books for adults. Our first bibliography – for the year 1975 – appeared in issue 11, and the next – for 1976 – in issue 13. Since then we have been working to lessen the time between book imprint date and appearance in our bibliographies. The current issue presents the 1977 listings, and the 1978s will appear within a few months.

Our main goal has been to make the list for young children and teenagers as complete as possible. There are, as a result, over 330 items, both in French and in English, for 1977. We have made every effort to include all books published during the year. Occasionally books which had been advertised as “forthcoming” never appear, and these have been deleted from our lists. While our investigations have been extensive, it is possible that omissions may have occurred especially where small publishers have not placed their books in the National Library Book Deposit. We would be grateful if our readers would let us know of any omissions or errors so that corrections can be made in future bibliographies.

Although the book titles are often indicative of content, we have tried to make our bibliography more useful to researchers, librarians, and teachers by coding it in two new ways this year: by genre and by audience. Wherever possible, two code letters in square brackets follow the entries.

The first letter refers to the type of book, as follows:

- F — fiction, fable, legend
- D — drama
- I — images/picture book, comic book
- P — poetry

Ref — reference book

Books without a code letter are non-fiction (e.g., travel, biography, religious books, cook-books).

The second letter refers to the estimated reading level of the book's audience:

P — primary (pre-school to grade 3)

J — junior (grades 4 to 8)

S — senior (grades 9 to 13)

Books without a code letter are for adults and professionals.

Thus, a book coded [I/P] would undoubtedly be a picture book for young children. A book coded [I/J] may be a comic book for junior readers, and an [I/S] may be a coffee-table type of picture or documentary book. Incidentally, we have included comic books among the French entries because of their possible interest in French immersion classes.

We have used our judgement about age levels, but we have also checked with reviews in several magazines, as well as with teachers and librarians. Age level classifications, of course, must always be approximate due to the wide variation in the reading ability of children. Many fourteen-year-olds read adult books with ease and comprehension and, conversely, there are adults who read only at a grade 8 level. Thus, while our codes take into account both the level of vocabulary and the suitability of content to a certain age, we emphasize that they are intended only as the most general guideline.

With respect to reprints of earlier books, we have included them only when they involve very old books (i.e., at least 50 years should have passed since they were last published), and new editions of more recent works are eligible only when they are noticeably revised in content or when a new edition includes such extensive and distinctive artwork that the book takes on a new dimension, as did, for instance, the 1976 edition of W.O. Mitchell's Who Has Seen the Wind which was illustrated by the late William Kurelek. In these instances the books can be said to enter anew into our cultural life, and their inclusion in a record of one year's output of literature is therefore justified.

We would like to thank Irene Aubrey, National Children's Librarian, for her co-operation in giving us generous access to the Canadian Children's Collection at the National Library and for answering many written and telephone inquiries about specific books and authors. We also appreciate the kind assistance of Berthe Arsenault, of Editions Champlain, the Toronto French Book Store. Special thanks go to Chris Waterston for her research assistance in checking all our entries against those books received for deposit in the children's section of the National Library. We are also very grateful to Ross McCague, our Ontario Arts Council Experience '80 Assistant, who carefully checked, completed, and assembled the final bibliography and then prepared it for printing under the direction of Elizabeth Waterston.
