

Canadian Children's Literature 1979

A Bibliography

MARY RUBIO

Once again we offer a complete record of a year's publication of books for Canadian children and young people. In 1975 we recorded 296 items; in 1976, 266 items; in 1977, 366 items; in 1978, 391 items; and now, for 1979, 393 items. In 1979 3,214 new children's titles were published in Great Britain; in the same year, 2,500 new titles were published in the United States.¹ Canada's market, so much smaller, is nevertheless a developing one because of commitment from government granting agencies, writers, publishers, promotional and professional organizations, librarians, teachers and scholars. As Monica Hughes notes in her article in this issue, the overall scene in the field of Canadian children's literature has improved a great deal in the last decade. Whether this progress can be maintained with the current economic recession is yet to be seen.

CCL produces its lists as an aid for researchers, teachers and librarians. In Canada, because of the small market, publishers sometimes blur the distinction between trade and educational titles, so we include texts in our bibliography if, in our judgement, they can be used outside the classroom. The books are coded as follows:

F-fiction, fable, legend

D-drama I-images/picture book, comic book

Ref-reference book

Books without a first code letter are non-fiction (e.g., travel, biography).

The second letter refers to the estimated reading level of the book's audience:

P-primary (pre-school to grade 3)

J-junior (grades 4 to 8)

S-senior (grades 9 to 11)

Books without a second code letter are for adults and professionals.

Thus, a book coded [I/P] would be a picture book for very young children, a book coded [I/J] may be a comic book for junior readers, and a book coded [I/S] may be a coffee-table type of picture or documentary book, of interest to older readers.

Foreign translations of Canadian books are not normally included, nor are books from France that are sold by Quebec publishers, unless they are printed with changes or adaptations by the Quebec firm. Quebec books which have been translated for English-Canadian readers, and English Canadian books translated into French are included, however. Likewise, foreign books which are translated specially for Canadian children, and hence enter our cultural mainstream, are included. Translations are listed under the translator's name only if the translator has adapted the work, as in the case of folk-tales.

We do not include reprints unless the original is substantially revised, or unless the original date of publication is more than fifty years ago. When books are reissued in paperback (as Bel-Ria, 1977, was by Bantam in 1978) they are not included.

Once again we record our gratitude to Irene Aubrey, National Children's Librarian, for her unfailing cooperation. Immnumerable publishers, authors and bookstores have also kindly answered our queries about publishing details and have helped us code the entries by type and audience level. Working at the National Library with us, Charlotte Waterston, who teaches French immersion in London, Ontario, helped compile the French entries; Rosemary Waterston assisted with the English lists. We are grateful also to Wieslawa Szlawieniec, a graduate student in the University of Guelph, Department of English, who computerized the bibliography.

¹These figures were provided by Judy Tye at the Children's Book Centre. The English figures are based on those given in Children's Books of the Year (1979), compiled by the National Book League of Great Britain. The American count, for tradebooks only, is taken from a Children's Book Council booklet entitled Children's Choices for 1980, which provides information about the 1979 publishing year.
